When a dispute is elevated to the legal environment for resolution, an independent and objective expert is needed to determine opinions and testify in deposition, trial, or alternative dispute resolution settings.

Pario applies our training and experience to make accounting and business determinations that are clear and stand up to scrutiny.

PARIO'S APPROACH

We form opinions drawn from a combination of technical knowledge, investigative skills, and business experience (both generally and industry specific) to meet the following objectives:

- Seek sufficient, relevant evidence to be able to form an opinion.
- Provide an independent and objective opinion to be submitted to court.
- Simplify complex calculations in a manner that can be clearly understood by attorneys, judges, and, ultimately, juries.
- Present a report whose conclusions have an appropriate underlying basis or support which can be readily produced.

We have found that we are able to provide the most value when engaged early in a litigation process, especially when requests for financial documentation are being prepared during discovery. Additionally, we understand that each venue has specific requirements that shape our assignment. We conduct our work within the rules specific to each venue.
